[CITY, STATE]—A new report from USAging provides a detailed look at how Area Agencies on Aging (AAAs) in [STATE] are serving older adults, family caregivers and other community members, while also comparing state findings to national trends.

The [STATE] Area Agencies on Aging State Data Report is based on responses from [#] percent of the state's AAAs, surpassing the threshold needed to provide a representative statewide snapshot. The report draws from USAging's 2025 National Survey of Area Agencies on Aging and combines survey findings with demographic and economic data about older adults in the state.

Among the report's key findings:

- [STATISTIC/HEADLINE FINDING #1]
- [STATISTIC/HEADLINE FINDING #2]
- [STATISTIC/HEADLINE FINDING #3]
- [STATISTIC/HEADLINE FINDING #4]

AAAs play a critical role in helping older adults remain healthy, independent and connected to their communities by providing services such as nutrition programs, caregiver support, transportation, care coordination, health promotion, benefits counseling and services that help people age in place.

"[STATE-SPECIFIC QUOTE ABOUT THE IMPORTANCE OF THE FINDINGS]," said [NAME, TITLE, ORGANIZATION]. "As the population ages and demand for services continues to grow, these data help illustrate both the impact of AAAs and the challenges they face in meeting community needs."

The report includes information on:

- The characteristics of older adults in [STATE]
- AAA budgets, staffing and volunteer support
- Waitlists for Older Americans Act services
- Funding sources and financial trends
- Populations served by AAAs
- Caregiver services and supports
- Partnerships and community engagement efforts
- Emerging needs and challenges affecting older adults and caregivers
